Self-Reflection and Commitment to Excellence

If you are a teacher, then you are used to working in an environment where 'change' is, paradoxically, one of the few constants. You are also used to trying to equip your students with the necessary attributes and skills to be future-ready and thrive in a knowledge-driven society while also trying to address the challenges arising from a rapidly globalising economy. You understand the importance of being adaptable and resourceful, striking a balance between fostering innovation and safeguarding your students from the potential negative aspects of a rapidly changing world. You recognise that this task requires you to be self-reflective, proactive, dedicated, committed and professional in addition to being an educator, a mentor, a role model and a moral agent. You also know that while good teachers reflect on their actions, reasons and methods in the classroom, exceptional ones not only engage in this reflective practice but also gain valuable insights from it, making necessary adjustments to enhance their performance on an ongoing basis. What you might not know, however, are the latest techniques for consistently meeting these requirements and navigating around any hindrances. By participating in this course, you will gain expertise in these methods and strategies. Completing this course will also help you meet the challenge of change in the modern classroom and become more successful, confident and forward-thinking. It will also open doors to national and international employment opportunities and provide you with a globally recognised certification.

Programme Highlights

During this course, you will

- learn about the power and impact of self-awareness and reflection;
- consider the benefits of being a reflective teacher, committed to excellence;
- learn how to develop your self-reflective practice and meet the requirements of 'the teacher of the future';
- examine various tools for self-reflection and quality improvement;
- develop a working understanding of successfully integrating self-reflection into your own teaching;
- learn how to adopt a reflective approach as part of your commitment to upholding the standards and importance of the teaching profession;
- learn how to seek and exploit continuous professional development (CPD) opportunities.
