Social-Emotional Learning (SEL) in the 21st Century

Social-Emotional Learning (SEL) refers to the process of developing skills and competencies related to managing emotions, building relationships and making responsible decisions. It's a teaching technique that helps students learn to manage their emotions in a positive way, build healthy relationships and make responsible decisions. It not only improves student well-being but also academic performance. SEL also promotes fairness and excellence in education by fostering genuine partnerships among schools, families and communities. It prioritises an environment of trust and collaboration, engaging and challenging curriculum and instruction and continuous assessment. It can play a role in resolving different kinds of inequity and give individuals the ability to help build successful educational settings and contribute to secure, healthy and fair communities. SEL programmes typically focus on developing skills such as self-awareness, self-management, social awareness, relationship skills and responsible decision-making through a variety of activities and strategies. By promoting Social-Emotional Learning in teaching, educators aim to help students develop lifelong or 21st-century skills that will benefit them personally and professionally.

Completing this course will help you meet the challenge of change in the modern classroom and become more successful, confident and forward-thinking. You'll also develop a working understanding of successful SEL-based teaching strategies that you can apply in your practice. You'll receive a wide variety of tools that can be used to navigate complex emotions, nurture awareness and exhibit pro-social behaviour for both yourself and your students. You'll gain a deeper understanding of the impact of SEL and you'll learn how to design engaging, inspiring, inclusive and accessible SEL-based learning programmes. Completing this programme will also open doors to national and international employment opportunities and provide you with a globally recognised certification.
